GOD'S LEADING LADY: OUT OF THE SHADOWS AND INTO THE LIGHT By Thomas Nelson

T. D. Jakes knows that society demands a great deal from women. They are told that they must do it all, give their all. But the truth is, many women feel that their souls are parched and they have nothing left to give. Many have been abused verbally, physically, and emotionally, leaving them scarred and lacking in self-worth. They are tired, uninspired, and spiritually impoverished, unsure of what they can offer and uncertain if they could ever do enough.

But now Bishop Jakes offers the balm to soothe their spirits and restore their souls. Drawing on the stories of the women of the Bible, Bishop Jakes shows all women how they can move beyond their imperfections and lack of self-esteem, and step up to claim the success the Lord has promised them. Bishop Jakes gives contemporary relevance to the ageless truths and principles found in the Scriptures, and empowers every woman to break the bonds of her worldly limitations and stand strong in the light of who she is in God. He teaches that whether a woman is leading a family or a corporation, she has within her the ability to impact the world. By guiding them to look inside themselves and toward the Lord, Bishop Jakes helps women find the power they need to unlock their destiny and excel.

Editorial Review

From Publishers Weekly

In the tradition of Woman, Thou Art Loosed! and The Lady, Her Lover, and Her Lord, Bishop Jakes continues to uplift Christian women with this charge for them to step out of the shadows and take their positions onstage as God's leading ladies. The stage metaphor is carried throughout; Jakes encourages women to master the art of improvisation (to put aside pre-arranged scripts... and go with what works in the moment) and to transcend life's outtakes (embarrassing failures). The writing style is vintage Jakes: he poses rhetorical but energetic questions to the reader, shares personal examples from his own life and draws upon the models other women have provided for success. He profiles several biblical women who knew how to step into the limelight: Deborah, Jael, Mary the mother of Jesus, Ruth, Sarah, Tamar and Eve all get juicy roles in Jakes's production. He deals with some sticky biblical passages, arguing, for example, that the let-wives-be-subject-to-their-husbands verse in Ephesians has too often been taken out of context and used to suppress women and rob them of their voices. Jakes also points to modern-day leading ladies, such as radio magnate Cathy Hughes, television icon Oprah Winfrey and First Lady Eleanor Roosevelt as role models. Some of his self-help advice is clichéd; readers are asked to decide, for example, whether their trials will make them bitter or better. Overall, however, Jakes offers a fresh and compassionate summons for women to recognize their divine worth.

From Library Journal

Like Bishop Vashti M. McKenzie in Journey to the Well (see Prepub Alert, LJ 2/15/02), Jakes tells women how they can restore their lives through belief.

Evangelist Jakes offers abundant encouragement to women trying to fulfill the demands of family, friends, home, job, church, and community. Using stage metaphors throughout, Jakes looks beyond the pretense of life for many women who dress to fit certain roles, act out certain scripts, and fail to realize their true roles in life. He confronts issues of low self-esteem, spiritual emptiness, self-doubt, and other limitations imposed by society or by the women themselves that prevent them from fulfilling their individual promise and potential. Jakes encourages women to live real, authentic, and fulfilling lives in harmony with God's purpose for them. He fortifies women against the myth that a person can have it all and advises achieving a balance that keeps in mind the need to nurture the spirit. Jakes cites living and biblical women--Ruth, Naomi, Mary Magdalene--as examples of those who overcome adversity, cope with sudden life changes thrust upon them by God, rise to challenges, and exhibit perseverance, trust, and faith. This is a book for women of all ages and of all economic and social statuses, and it speaks to a range of issues from single motherhood to ill health to financial crises to troubled marriages. Jakes' fans will love this latest message of encouragement and spiritual empowerment. Vanessa Bush
