Las Verdades de Chavela (Paréntesis Musical) (Spanish Edition) By Chavela Vargas, María Cortina

"My name is Chavela Vargas. I am ninety years old and am alive. I have lived because there is so much to live for, so much to love, I can shout that I am alive, like life, like the color red, like the red thoughts that taste like bread." This is an emotionally exciting testimony of an extraordinary woman. It chronicles an existence characterized by the fires of passion, nonconformity, and rebellion. Chavela Vargas puts on these pages her eventful, long, and rocky journey, and she does so with an open heart, without holding anything back, unrepentant. The friends, the loves, the alcohol, the torments of the heart, the untiring efforts to be herself, the awards, the tributes, and above everything else, her interpretations—that searing and sincere song in which you can see the true depth of the human condition."

Editorial Review

About the Author

Isabel Vargas Lizano, known as Chavela Vargas, was born in 1919 in Costa Rica. She left her country in her adolescence to establish herself in Mexico. After many numerous attempts, she got her start in the world of song. She knew and dealt with the prominent figures of the big screen, of the arts, of politics and culture, including Diego Rivera, Frida Kahlo, Agustin Lara, Ava Gardner, Pablo Neruda, and José Alfredo Jimenez. With this last one, she maintained an enduring and close friendship. She recorded numerous records with her own songs and those of other composers. She has performed in many international venues, such as the Paris Olympics, Carnegie Hall, and the Palace of Fine Arts in Mexico. In 2000, the Spanish Council of Ministers bestowed upon her the Cross of Isabella the Catholic, and in 2009 the government of Mexico City awarded her the Distinguished Citizen Medal. A street in Burgos is named after her. María Cortina was born in Mexico City in 1953. She is a newspaper reporter and a writer. She has written for many newspapers and numerous national and international publications, as well as the electronic media.
